With new owners, comes a new focus

Originally aimed at professionals, complex now catering to students

By KARIE SIMMONS

A residential complex currently under construction at Suburban Plaza and originally presented earlier this year as apartments for families and professionals is now being marketed primarily to University of Delaware students as off-campus housing.

When the project, originally called the Cottages at the Plaza, was introduced earlier this year, the site developer said the location would attract professionals working at places like Bloom Energy on UD's STAR Campus, as well as other research and technology facilities nearby.

"It is unrealistic to think that there won't be any students there, however, there are also families that may easily want five bedrooms," Lisa Goodman, an attorney for the developer AUDG Holdings, told the planning commission March 5. "I expect that there will be a mix here, but I think you can see from the high-end amenities and design here that they're going after professionals to the extent that that is possible."

Several councilmen and then-mayor Vance A. Funk III agreed, indicating they were pleased that the project

Seven file for mayoral election

Morehead joins crowded field

By JOSH SHANNON

jshannon@newarkpostonline.com

Seven candidates will vie for mayor in the special election scheduled for later this month.

The filing deadline was Monday evening.

The candidates are: Donald Del-Collo, Jr., Robyn Harland, Mark Morehead, Rebecca Powers, Amy Roe, Polly Sierer and Matthew Vento.

MOREHEAD

All seven have had their nominating petitions verified by City Secretary Renee Bensley.

The election, prompted by the Sept. 30 resignation of Vance A. Funk III, is set for Nov. 26 from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. To be eligible to vote, city residents must be a registered voter by Monday.

Absentee ballots can be requested by calling the city secretary at 302-366-7070.

Morehead, currently in his second term as District 1's councilman, announced his candidacy Oct. 25, just three days before the deadline, noting that he has long considered a run for mayor.

"It was something I was always going to do, but I didn't expect Vance to retire early," Morehead said.

Annual parade celebrates Halloween

By JOSH SHANNON

jshannon@newarkpostonline.com

Ghosts, witches and goblins took over Main Street on Sunday afternoon as Newark held its annual Halloween parade.

Thousands turned out to watch the parade under clear blue skies, decidedly different weather than last year, when Hurricane Sandy forced the cancellation of the parade.

More than 70 bands, school groups, scout troops and other organizations – a total of 1,800 people – marched in the parade, which ran from Tyre Avenue to South College Avenue.

Following the parade, hundreds of kids participated in Trick-or-Treat Main Street, during which many downtown merchants handed out candy and other treats.

Sandwich chain Jimmy John's to open on Main Street

By JOSH SHANNON

jshannon@newarkpostonline.com

Jimmy John's Gourmet Sandwiches, the Illinois-based chain best known for its fast delivery, has confirmed plans to open a restaurant in Newark.

The franchise location will open sometime this winter at 133 E. Main St., according to Jessica Lutchen, a spokeswoman for the company.

The sandwich shop will replace Main Street Sliders, the burger joint that closed in April after increased competition made it too hard for the independently-owned eatery to survive.

Renovations on the restaurant began this fall, and earlier this month, crews covered the windows in "coming soon" posters that tempt passersby with larger-than-life photos of sandwiches but do not name the company.

Lutchen would not say specifically when Jimmy John's will open, nor would she provide the name of the franchise owner.

Founded in 1983 by 19-year-old Jimmy John Liataud, the chain now has more than 1,600 locations around the country.

It specializes in fast – or "freaky fast," as the company's advertisements say – delivery of subs and club sandwiches. Because it relies on being close to its delivery customers, the company tends to locate in densely populated areas and has many locations near college campuses.

The Main Street restaurant will be the company's first in Delaware. Currently, the closest ones are in Abingdon, Md., and Philadelphia.

Many Delawareans are likely more familiar with a different Jimmy John's – the decades-old hot dog eatery on Route 202 in West Chester, Pa. – but the two companies are not affiliated.

Drug Take Back Day collects 5,000+ pounds statewide

By ZAC CROCE

Special to the Post

This past weekend, local law enforcement's effort to curb prescription drug abuse was met with much success.

National Prescription Drug Take Back Day took place Saturday at the Newark Senior Center and the UD Office of Public Safety. Newark Police Department and the UD Police Department participated in the effort, which is a national initiative from the DEA.

In total, over 5,000 pounds of unwanted prescription drugs were collected in the state of Delaware – 1,413 pounds in Kent County, 1,212 pounds in Sussex County and 2,632 pounds in New Castle County, according to DEA spokesman John Hamrick. Hamrick believes there is an obvious importance to the program.

"The numbers show how important it is that people are disposing of their pills in a proper manner," Hamrick said. "Getting anything off the streets is a success, so 5,000 pounds is a big success."

Abuse rates for prescription drugs are high in the United States as these drugs are acquired through family and friends or home medicine cabinets, officials said. More than 7 million Americans abuse prescription drugs, according to a UD Police Department press release, which is why Sgt. Jeffrey Gates, of the UDPD, shared Hamrick's feelings.

"From what it looks like, we're calling it a success, because whenever we can get those items out of a medicine cabinet, it is a good thing," Gates said.

The benefits of the take back and the importance of properly disposing of prescription drugs should not be overlooked, officials say. A popular means to dispose of prescription drugs is by flushing them down the toilets. However, flushing the drugs could mean they will find their way back into homes as water treatment facilities are not equipped to filter drug compounds, ultimately leading to these compounds ending up in drinking water.

Bomb threat reported in ELI building

A woman discovered a tin can in a University of Delaware English Language Institute building with a message written on the lid insinuating the presence of a bomb, police say.

The incident happened on Oct. 23 at 9 a.m. in the ELI building at 318 South College Ave, according to Cpl. James Spadola, spokesman for the Newark Police Department.

The woman entered a first-floor break room of the building and saw a can of cashews on top of the microwave. Upon opening the can, she noticed it was empty and discovered a message written on the lid in black marker that read, "The bomb has been planted."

Spadola said the woman immediately evacuated the building and called police. Once on scene, an officer and a K-9 unit searched the building but found no evidence of an explosive device.

Police have no suspects at this time.

Burglar steals cash and watches

A man and his girlfriend returned to his home on Casho Mill Road after leaving for a few hours to find his front storm door slightly ajar and unlocked.

The break-in occurred sometime between 8:15 and 11:48 p.m. on Oct. 25, according to Newark Police spokesman James Spadola, who said the homeowner was sure the house was secured before he left.

Upon entering his home, the man and his girlfriend saw that a closet behind the front door had been rummaged through and his dog, which he left to roam the first floor, had been put inside a bathroom with the door closed.

Spadola said the burglar stole cash, a $600 Burberry watch and a $160 We-Wood watch, along with damaging the front door of the home where the screen door was attached.

Large bar fight leaves man unconscious

Police are investigating a brawl that involved more than 30 people over the weekend at a South College Avenue bar.

According to Cpl. James Spadola, a spokesman for the Newark Police Department, the fight happened on Sunday at 1:09 a.m. inside WizeGuyz Sports Lounge and Grill. When officers arrived at the scene, they found one man unconscious. He was taken to Christiana Hospital and sustained serious injuries.

Spadola could not release all the details of the event as it is still under investigation. He asked that anyone with any information contact Detective Michael Watson at Michael.watson@cj.state.de.us.

Man falls victim to Green Dot MoneyPak scam

A man lost hundreds of dollars in a scam involving Green Dot MoneyPak cards after he received a call from someone who claimed to be a Delmarva Power employee.

The victim was contacted on Oct. 23 at 4 p.m. by a man who said he worked at Delmarva, Newark Police Spokesman Cpl. James Spadola said. The caller informed the victim that his electric bill was past due and that if he did not pay $1,000 in the form of two $500 Green Dot MoneyPak cards, his service would be disconnected.

The victim immediately went to a 7-Eleven, put $500 on two Green Dot cards and called the man back to read off the card numbers as instructed. After hanging up, Spadola said, the victim grew suspicious and called Delmarva to ask about the payment, to which the power company said he had been involved in a scam.

He called the scammer back but the number had been disconnected.

On Oct. 25, Spadola said the victim called Green Dot and reported the scam. The company reimbursed him for $700 but were unable to give him the full amount because the scammer had already used $300.

Tools, equipment stolen from box trucks

Thousands of dollars worth of property was taken from trucks in a side parking lot, but not before the suspects tampered with the parking lot's security cameras.

The theft occurred in the early morning hours on Oct. 24 at the 700 block of Interchange Boulevard, Newark Police Spokesman Cpl. James Spadola said. Security cameras pointed at the parking lot show a white Chevy commercial van pull into the lot at 12:02 a.m., and at 12:10 a.m. a sudan also entered the lot. At 12:18 a.m., the cameras captured a subject with a pole pushing the cameras out of position and not in view of the trucks in the lot.

Sometime after the cameras were tampered with, Spadola said, the suspects cut the locks off of three box trucks and removed a long list of tools and equipment worth a total of $4,098. The cameras did not capture the theft and police, have no suspects at this time.

Newark-area man accused in attempted murder of estranged wife

jshannon@newarkpostonline.com

A Newark-area man, captured last week in a wooded area of Maryland, is awaiting extradition to New Castle County, where he will face charges of attempted murder of his estranged wife and another man.

Steven Baynum, 30, was arrested Oct. 24 following an hours-long, two-state manhunt that involved officers from several jurisdictions, K-9 units and a helicopter.

The incident began at about 3 a.m. inside a house in the unit block of Harvest Lane in the Glen Farms neighborhood, located north of Newark, a few hundred yards from the state line.

Cpl. John Weglarz Sr., a spokesman for the New Castle County Police Department, said Baynum entered the residence and began assaulting his 28-year-old wife and a 21-year-old man. The wife called 911, but Baynum allegedly grabbed the phone from her before she could talk to dispatchers.

Baynum then pulled out a knife and threatened the woman before fleeing, Weglarz said, who noted that the female victim had an active restraining order against Baynum. Both victims suffered minor injuries.

The couple's two young children were in the home during the alleged assault, Weglarz said.

Police officers, dispatched for a 911 hang-up, arrived moments later and began canvassing the area for Baynum.

Later that morning, police were tipped off that Baynum had returned to his home in the 900 block of New London Road, less than a half mile from where the alleged assault took place.

Officers spotted him, but he took off on foot, crossing into Maryland. Police set up a perimeter and took Baynum into custody after a foot chase at approximately 10:45 a.m.

Once extradited, Baynum will be charged with attempted murder and other related offenses, Weglarz said.

DelCollo: Help businesses by fixing traffic, parking issues

By JOSH SHANNON

jshannon@newarkpostonline.com

There's no doubt in Don DelCollo's mind what businesses in Newark need to thrive.

"You want people to have access to your business," he said.

That means having streets that aren't congested and parking that is convenient and available — two issues that have long dogged downtown Newark.

DelCollo, a resident of Kells Avenue, has made improving infrastructure a main issue in his campaign for mayor.

"All they're asking for is help to get customers to their door," he said, referring to business owners.

DelCollo speaks from experience, having once operated retail stores on Main Street.

Raised in Wilmington, he opened a retail store behind Abbott's Shoe Repair in 1978. Over the next three decades, he ran several clothing and gift stores downtown, including Gypsy Trader, Outer Limit and Old Market Road.

He is now a senior loan officer for Pike Creek Mortgage. He also serves as treasurer for Newark Natural Foods and the Mid Atlantic Food Co-op Alliance, in addition to coaching basketball for the city parks and recreation league.

He considered running for mayor in 2004, but bowed out when Vance A. Funk III entered the race. After Funk resigned Sept. 30, DelCollo decided it was finally time for him to run.

"I've been waiting a long time for this," he said. "I have the business experience and local experience to be mayor of this city."

Parking and traffic are difficult issues, but ones he is looking forward to tackling, he said.

"As hard as they are, I want to solve them," DelCollo said.

If elected, he plans to sit down with University of Delaware officials and discuss a deal to allow the city to use some of UD's parking lots in the evenings.

In addition, the city needs to find a way to divert traffic from downtown, DelCollo said.

"I have a plan for traffic," he said. However, in an interview with the Post, he declined to provide details of his plan.

He did note that one idea includes creating a bypass for the Route 2/Route 273 intersection but did not elaborate on how that would be done.

DelCollo said he opposes The Data Centers LLC's proposed power plant, which would be built on the UD's STAR Campus.

"I'm for jobs, but not jobs at any cost," he said. "I can't see how the negatives of the power plant are outweighed by its positives."

He also opposes the proposed Wawa on South Main Street.

"It's a giant lit-up area 24/7," he said. "It would change the identity of that corner forever."

However, he said, something needs to be done to revitalize the Park N Shop shopping center. The answer, he said, comes back to fixing traffic issues.

As a resident of a neighborhood that borders the UD campus, DelCollo said he is glad to see that the increase in off-campus apartments has helped stem the influx of students renting single-family homes in residential neighborhoods. However, he said, when a development project is proposed, mayor and council need to look long and hard at the ramifications of approving it.

"Every project needs to be looked at," he said.

Editor's note: Over the next three weeks, the Post will profile each of the seven candidates for mayor. Check next week's issue for more profiles.

NEWARK POST PHOTO BY KARIE SIMMONS

Elizabeth and Marty Perkins hold a picture of their son, John, who died of a drug-related overdose in 2011. John's death inspired his parents to begin campaigning for Delaware's 911 Good Samaritan law, which went into effect on Sept. 1. City council passed a similar law this week.

Council passes medical amnesty ordinance

By KARIE SIMMONS

ksimmons@newarkpostonline.com

City council voted unanimously Monday night to pass an ordinance that gives immunity to people who seek medical help for themselves or someone else who is overdosing on drugs or alcohol.

City Solicitor Bruce Herron said the ordinance is intended to bring city code into conformance with the state's 911 Good Samaritan law, which states that if someone calls 911 regarding an overdose or administers aid, that person cannot be prosecuted stemming from that 911 call.

On July 2, the 911 Good Samaritan law was unanimously passed by the Senate and the House of Representatives and signed by Gov. Jack Markell. The law went into effect Sept. 1, making Delaware the 14th state to have a drug overdose medical amnesty law.

The state law was passed in large part due to advocacy by Elizabeth and Marty Perkins, of Brookside, who fought for the amnesty provision in memory of their son, John, who died of a drug overdose in 2011.

The ordinance passed unanimously at Monday night's city council meeting, with some council members voicing their full support.

"I think this is a live-saving law," Councilman Mark Morehead said.

Harland wants honesty for Newark

By KARIE SIMMONS

ksimmons@newarkpostonline.com

Five years ago, Robyn Harland was visiting Newark from New York City when she heard about Newark's Homebuyer Incentive Program, which provides deferred payment loans to first-time home purchasers.

The program gave Harland, then 64, the ability to own her first home, and ever since she moved here, she's wanted to give something back to the community.

Now, she's making a run for the mayor's office, hoping her outspoken nature and no-nonsense attitude will be just what the city needs.

"Now I'm retired and I can really jump in the ring," she said. "I know what needs to be done."

Harland is the single mother of daughter Asha, 30, and son James, 28, whom she adopted in the 1980s. Before moving to her Newark home on Ethan Allen Court four years ago, Harland lived in New York City for 45 years where she was a special education teacher and union leader.

She currently serves as president of the Cherry Hill Manor Maintenance Association and on the Community Development Block Grant committee.

Harland has run unsuccessfully for city council twice in the past, losing to Mark Morehead in 2011 and Marge Hadden earlier this year, but said she's not taking no for an answer in her campaign for mayor.

Her past experience working successfully with city officials to upgrade her community shows she knows how to get things done, she said. Harland pushed for road repair and maintenance in her neighborhood, as well as the installation of additional street lights.

She said that as mayor, she would hold developers accountable, specifically citing the proposed data center and power plant on University of Delaware's STAR Campus, as well as the proposed Wawa on South Main Street, which she does not support due to its close proximity to residential areas.

Harland said she's "very upset" about The Data Centers, LLC's plan to build a 248-megawatt generating combined heating and power plant on the STAR Campus because she said it's not what the university originally presented for the site four years ago. She's nervous that if the power plant is built, the university, which currently purchases electricity through the city of Newark, will buy its power from TDC instead and the city will suffer a loss in revenue.

"I have an issue with it," Harland said. "The rich guys want to keep the rich guys rich and I'm not into that. Big business can't bully the little guy."

As mayor, she would push for transparency in the city's dealings with the university and wants to sit down with university officials to have a discussion.

"The university basically owns Newark," she said. "Let's be real here."

Fighting for "the underdog," as Harland called it, is what she's most passionate about, especially when comes to providing for senior citizens. Although she's vocal on a variety of issues, she said the main reason she's running goes back to transparency. She just wants to keep everybody honest, she said.

If elected, she said she would be honored to follow in Vance A. Funk III's footsteps.

"He was a great mayor and a great humanitarian," Harland said.

Editor's note: Over the next three weeks, the Newark Post will profile each of the seven candidates for mayor. Check next week's issue for more profiles.

He said that he held off announcing his run until Deputy Mayor Jerry Clifton decided whether he would run. Clifton announced last month that he would not.

"I wanted to give him time to decide and become comfortable with that decision," Morehead said.

Morehead, a 54-year-old resident of Swallow Circle, said that, if elected, his main goal would be increasing transparency in city government.

"Newark has been run for a long time with the administration leading," he said. "Council is meant to be the check and balance. We're working toward reaching that balance, but there's more work to be done."

Though the other six candidates have been campaigning for several weeks, Morehead does not believe his late entry into the race will hurt his chances.

"It's a matter of who the residents would like to represent them," he said. "While it's later, the residents have seen me in a similar role. I'm more familiar than some of the folks."

Powers, of Lehigh Road, is a landscape designer and serves as president of the Delaware chapter of the National Organization for Women. She has previously served on the Downtown Newark Partnership's design committee.

A day in the principal's office

A first-person look at running a school

By JOSH SHANNON

jshannon@newarkpostonline.com

Gone are the days when a school principal spends most of her time in her office, managing staff and dealing with students primarily when there's a problem.

Today's principal is always on the go and has a frequent presence in the classroom.

I got to experience that first-hand on Monday when I participated in the Principal for a Day program, shadowing West Park Place Elementary School principal Ledonnis Hernandez.

The program, sponsored by the Delaware Chamber of Commerce, began in 2004 and matches up business and community leaders with principals throughout the state for a one-day crash course in what it takes to run a school. It's meant to foster relationships between schools and businesses and give participants an idea of the challenges principals face. Since its inception, more than 1,200 people have served as guest principals.

I arrive at the school just after 9 a.m., and Hernandez is already out making her rounds. We meet up in the school office and after a few brief introductions, we're off to visit classrooms.

"Let's hit the streets," Hernandez says.

She tries to pop in on every classroom each day. Sometimes it's for formal observations, but more often it's just for a few minutes to see what the students are doing and offer a word of encouragement.

We stop in a fourth-grade classroom where students are learning about prime and composite numbers, poke our heads into an ESL (English as a Second Language) classroom where a teacher is working with a small group of students on their language skills and then watch music lessons being conducted in the cafeteria.

As we tour the building, Hernandez tells me a bit about the school.

Nestled away in a quiet neighborhood off West Park Place, the school houses 385 students in grades K-5, making it one of the smaller elementary schools in the Christina School District. It is also home to the district's ESL program and has students from 32 nationalities.

"It's like a little United Nations right here," Hernandez says. "Where else in Newark would you find this much diversity?"

By now, it's only 10:30 and we've already visited more than half the classrooms.

"Being a principal is a very aerobic experience," Hernandez says. "You get a lot of mileage."

"In recent years, we've been talking about the principal as an educational leader," she adds. "Principals aren't just managers anymore."

We make our way to the third-grade hallway for our main task of the day – doing formal, unannounced observations of two teachers. We sit in the back of each classroom for about 20 minutes each, jotting notes about the teacher's performance. The notes will later be entered into a Web-based evaluation system and discussed in person with the teacher.

In one of the classes, the students are doing a writing exercise, learning how to write a critique of an article. In another, it's science time, and the kids are doing an experiment with rocks and minerals.

As lunchtime approaches, we head back to the office for our turn to man the front desk. (Hernandez does so each day while school secretary Laverne Cameron takes her lunch break.)

Hernandez often gets too busy to eat during the school day, but we manage to fit in a quick bite before "hitting the streets" again. I sample the fare at the school cafeteria – barbecue riblet, salad with "Popeye" spinach, broccoli and cheese and a fruit cup. Hernandez opts instead for a bag of microwave popcorn and a package of instant oatmeal, which she eats from a coffee mug as she answers emails and approves requisition forms.

It's over lunch that we get a few minutes to chat.

Originally from New York, Hernandez got her start in education as a middle school teacher in Baltimore. She worked her way up to administration and, after a health scare, moved to this area to be closer to family. This is her fourth year at West Park Place.

The best part about her job, she says, is the interactions with the students.

"You can have a crummy day or feel overwhelmed, but seeing the kids is rewarding," she said. "You get to see the kids grow and learn and see those 'aha' moments."

A few minutes later, we're on the move again, and I get to see those cheerful interactions when we stop by the cafeteria and students greet Hernandez with smiles and hugs. Then we step outside to observe recess and get some fresh air before sitting in on the annual fire safety assembly, conducted by Aetna Hose Hook and Ladder's John H. Farrell IV.

After a few more classroom visits, the day comes to a close. Hernandez lets me make the afternoon announcements over the intercom system, and then we stand in the hallway to say goodbye to the students as they head to their buses.

The smiling kids wave to Hernandez or give her a hug as they pass, and it's easy to see why she enjoys her job.

"I couldn't imagine going back to an environment with all big people," she says.

Downes first graders do-si-do at Barn Dance

By KARIE SIMMONS

kisimmons@newarkpostonline.com

Dressed in plaid button-down shirts and cowboy hats, first graders at Downes Elementary School participated in the school's annual Barn Dance Monday by swinging their partners 'round and 'round.

Music teacher Joe Ambrosino led the event, which he said is a celebration of the American harvest, in the cafeteria by singing and playing classic songs like "Kansas City Railroad Blues." He even performed a few original pieces, such as a song called "Apples" he said he wrote himself.

The first graders sang along with Ambrosino, do-si-doed and square danced all around the cafeteria during the Barn Dance on Monday. Second grade students participated on Tuesday and kindergarteners on Thursday.

Yellowjackets 'humbled' in home loss

By MATT BITTLE
Special to the Post

Hosting a team head coach Butch Simpson described as state-title worthy, the Newark Yellowjackets were beaten badly at home Oct. 25. The Hodgson Silver Eagles scored early and often en route to a 48-9 win.

"Tonight we were humbled by a superior team," Simpson said. "We knew coming into this that Hodgson really did not have a weakness."

The game began poorly for Newark, with Hodgson junior quarterback Raymond Jones —praised by Simpson as having the talent to play college football — throwing a touchdown pass on the game's opening drive. Following a botched snap, Newark turned it over to Hodgson at the one-yard line, setting the Eagles up for a second touchdown, this one coming less than a minute later.

Jones then rushed for a 51-yard score on the team's next possession, giving the Silver Eagles a 20-0 lead after four minutes and 50 seconds of play.

The Yellowjackets' defense tightened up after that, allowing only one more first-half score, this one coming on a 27-yard run in the second quarter. Later in the second, Newark sophomore defensive lineman Tymeer Jones came up with a sack in the end zone for a safety that put the Yellowjackets on the board. After a Hodgson turnover, the teams went into halftime with the Silver Eagles leading 28-2.

In the third stanza, a Raymond Jones rushing touchdown made the score 34-2.

Newark then put together its finest drive of the night, picking up yardage both through the air and on the ground. The series ended with the Yellowjackets' lone touchdown of the game when senior tailback Keith Stubbs took it in from 1 yard out.

Trailing 34-9, Newark was unable to stop Hodgson from expanding its lead. Two rushing touchdowns in the final minutes of the third quarter put it at 48-9. With some backups receiving playing time for both teams in the final quarter, the Silver Eagles burned clock while preventing the Yellowjackets from adding another score, and the game ended with Hodgson earning a 39-point victory.

Simpson said though he saw some things he liked, his team was simply outmuscled at the line of scrimmage and could not match the Silver Eagles' speed.

The Yellowjackets travel to Middletown tonight. The Cavaliers, winner of the past two state championships, are 8-0. They will be a great challenge for Newark, Simpson said.

"They've been humbling everybody," he said. "What people don't realize about Middletown is everything down there really starts with how well they play defense."

Long season coming to an end for Delaware Saints

Travel baseball team has competed in 15 tournaments

By JON BUZBY

Newark Post columnist

The fall weather has finally arrived, and it sure feels like football season here in Newark. That is, unless you play for the Delaware Saints.

In the minds of the 14 players who take the field nearly every weekend for the local travel baseball club, it's still sunny and warm outside, just like in the spring during the "real" baseball season. But when you consider this team is getting ready to compete in its seventh weekend-long baseball tournament since school started, an argument can be made that fall is, in fact, the real baseball season.

And manager Jim Kaden wouldn't have it any other way.

"The weather is great and we have a lot of opportunities to play some very good teams," Kaden said. "The fall is a great time to work on players' individual skills and try new positions. It's also a great time for the coaches to evaluate for the following spring/summer season."

The Saints' 2013 spring/summer season started March 16 in the Ripken Leadoff Tournament at The Ripken Experience in Aberdeen, Md. Since that opening event, the Saints have competed in 14 tournaments in four different states. This weekend they'll return to Aberdeen to play in the Walk-Off Classic, the Saints' final tournament of the year.

"While it is a long season, the parents and kids are great, and it makes it a lot of fun," said Kaden, who, when he's not managing the Saints, is the assistant director of the University of Delaware ice arenas and outdoor pool. "We always take several breaks during the season so the kids can enjoy being kids."

The Saints are no longer the new kids on the travel baseball block. Kaden started the travel club in 2010, and the Saints have fielded a team every year since.

Unlike many travel teams that experience consistent turnover from one season to the next for one reason or another, Kaden is proud to still have nine of the original players on his roster. He credits this unique situation to the fact that the team doesn't hold tryouts and instead finds its talent in an untraditional way.

"We actually pick the parents," said Kaden, whose son, Brad, plays on the team. "I knew a few parents, other parents knew a few other parents, and the team was started. The parents and kids are the key to our success. Everyone is pulling for each other and we are truly a team."

That philosophy off the field has resulted in wins on it. In the Saints' previous three seasons, they have won at least 31 games and never lost more than 17. This fall season alone the Saints have a 19-4 record, two championships, and three second-place finishes on their résumé while playing a more difficult schedule than ever before against some of the region's toughest competition.

The Saints' biggest tournament win in 2013 came in August at the Sunset Classic in Myrtle Beach. The team went 8-0 and captured the 13U championship with a 5-3 win over the Jackels. The eight wins included beating two teams from Florida, where it's always baseball season.

"Going 8-0 at a week-long tournament is very difficult," Kaden reflected. "The kids had a great time playing baseball and also hanging out together at the pool and beach. It was a special week for the team."

The team won't be splashing around in an outdoor pool or building sandcastles this weekend. Instead they'll pack extra layers as they travel one hour south to their season's final destination. They take a club-record 45 wins with them, so it makes perfect sense that the players' goal in Aberdeen is a simple one — to hoist the championship trophy. But for Kaden, it always has been and always will be about so much more than hardware.

"While we want to be successful on the field, our main goal is playing and teaching the kids the game the correct way while playing competitive baseball," Kaden explained. "We've always scheduled tournaments where we know the competition is going to be at a high level. It's not always about winning. It's about getting the kids ready to play high school baseball and hopefully college, so we want to play competitive teams when we travel to tournaments."

"When coaches and parents from the winning team tell our coaching staff and our kids how impressed they are with how the kids played the game, to me that is more important than winning a trophy," Kaden added. "We are teaching the kids how to play the game correctly and other people notice. One coach told me, 'We've played all over the country and your kids are first class.' That's what is most important to me."

Bing's Bakery to be featured in TLC show

By KARIE SIMMONS

ksimmons@newarkpostonline.com

Pastry Chef Buddy Valastro of TLC's "Cake Boss" is in Newark this week to help Delaware's longest running bakery revamp the business and make some dough.

Filming of an episode of "Bakery Boss" at Bing's Bakery on East Main Street began Tuesday and runs through today.

In the new TLC series, which is a spinoff of "Cake Boss," Valastro visits small, family-owned bakeries struggling to be successful and helps them turn their business around by identifying the shop's shortcomings. Valastro's family owns Carlo's Bakery in Hoboken, N.J. and two other locations in New Jersey.

for help may come as a shock to some Delawareans and Newark residents, as the shop has been in the state for 67 years. The full-line scratch bakery, founded in 1946 by Russell and Selina Bing, makes pastries, torts, wedding cakes, birthday cakes, bread and original butter cookies and markets itself as Delaware's longest-running bakery.

Since 2005, the shop has been owned by head baker Tom Guzzi and his wife, Carla. According to Bing's website, Tom has over 25 years experience in the industry and has worked at Bing's since 1996.

"Bakery Boss" spokeswoman Colleen Douglass said Bing's owners and employees have signed non-disclosure agreements prior to filming and are not allowed to comment on the episode or the state of the business.

However, Douglass did confirm that the Guzzis applied for Valastro to come to their bakery as part of the show.

TLC's casting website states that the show is for "bakeries in need of some TLC" but a manager at Bing's declined to comment whether or not the business is struggling. The bakery's Facebook page states that the owners are excited to appear on the show and for Valastro "to help us make our business into the success we know it can be."

Out of the Attic

Newark basement to outer space — 1958 to 2013

This week's Out of the Attic item is an undated view of a house built about 1950 on Paper Mill Road and overlooking the White Clay Creek as the residence of Wilbert (Bill) and Genevieve (Vieve) Gore and their children Robert (Bob), Susan, David, Ginger and Elizabeth.

The Gores had come from Utah, where Bill had earned degrees in chemical engineering and physical chemistry to work at the DuPont Experimental Station. The parents were involved in community volunteering and the children all attended and graduated from Newark High School.

It was not long before the home basement recreation room became a science lab and the garage became a mini-manufacturing site. Bill left DuPont in 1958 to start his own company, exploring the properties and applications of Teflon (PTFE). Bill's son, Bob, who was studying chemical engineering at the University of Delaware, came up with the idea to use Teflon in tape form rather than powder form when insulating wires. Bob's idea was patented and the company took off.

The first plant was built between the house and Paper Mill Road to include office, laboratory and production spaces. Additional facilities were built in the Newark and Elkton, Md., area and then further away, each with no more than 200 workers (or associates as Bill called them) in keeping with his unique concept of how people work together.

Today, 55 years later, Gore facilities are located around the world and Gore products are found in all aspects of daily life at home, at work, in recreation, in medical practice, in advanced research, in space science and more. From a Newark home basement to a worldwide footprint to prominence in space exploration, W. L. Gore and Associates has excelled.

To learn more of the Gore story, visit the Newark History Museum special community opening this Tuesday, Nov. 5, from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. or during regular museum hours.

Learn more about Newark history. Visit the Newark History Museum located on South College Avenue beside the bridge. It is open Sundays from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. now through November. It is also open by appointment at other times all year. Individuals, families, groups, and organizations may call 302-368-9845 to arrange a morning, afternoon, evening, weekday or weekend museum visit. would appeal to professionals, a demographic city officials have long sought to attract. The rezoning required for the project was approved 5-2 at the April 22 council meeting.

However, since then, the still-unbuilt Cottages at the Plaza was sold to Georgia-based Landmark Properties, which manages several students housing communities around the country.

Landmark changed the name and concept of the project to The Retreat at Newark: University of Delaware Apartments, a 169-unit housing complex surrounding Suburban Plaza on Elkton Road.

According to Landmark Director of Leasing and Marketing Rob Dinwiddie, The Retreat at Newark will be completed in August and is currently marketed primarily to students. The development's Facebook page boasts The Retreat as the "official student housing partner of UD athletics," which Dinwiddie said allows Landmark to use the UD logo.

"It's helpful from a marketing standpoint," he said, adding that as of last week 20 leases had been signed for the 2014 school year.

Dinwiddie expects The Retreat will be occupied by more than 95 percent students once all leases have been signed. The complex will have 169 total units, same design as the Cottages at the Plaza, with 39 four and five-bedroom, two-story cottages and 130 one, two and four-bedroom lodge-style apartments for a total of 597 beds. Dinwiddie said each bedroom will have its own one-year lease, making it easy for students to either sign with a group of friends or by themselves.

Rent ranges from $695 for a room in a four-bedroom lodge to $1,090 for a one-bedroom lodge and includes parking, water, sewer, cable, Internet, garbage pickup and the complex's amenity package. Tenants will have to pay their own electricity bill, Dinwiddie said.

The Retreat amenities are similar to what was presented for the proposed Cottages at the Plaza, but are now presented as a draw for the college-aged crowd. There will be study lounges and private rooms for group work, computer lounges, a gaming room, golf simulator, two fitness facilities, a clubhouse and the largest pool at any UD off-campus housing community, according to Dinwiddie. Laundry machines will be in every house and apartment and the complex will have a private shuttle service to and from campus and Main Street with the hopes of eventually getting on the UD shuttle bus route, he said.

The change in concept surprised some city officials, including Planning Director Maureen Feeney Roser.

"I'm very disappointed in the misrepresentation," Feeney Roser said. "We should have been notified of the name change."

However, because the zoning for the site was approved as residential and still remains residential, she said the company did not legally have to inform the city about the changes.

Although it has only happened a few times in the past, Feeney Roser said it is not a good process for developers to change the name of an approved site or street name without going through the city. She said she is currently drafting a resolution that would prevent this from happening in the future and hopes the first reading will go to council on Nov. 11.

However once in place, she does not think the city will be able to act retroactively against Landmark Properties.

"I'm not sure we will be able to do anything about it," Feeney Roser said.

Councilman Luke Chapman, one of two council members who voted against the original project, said he opposed the development because he saw this coming.

In May he said he thought the developer's desire to have a mix of tenants would in fact push away families and single, working professionals looking to live there.

"I am convinced that the developer's claim that the one and two-bedroom units will appeal to young professionals, or any non-student tenant is ridiculous due solely to design layout placing those smaller units in between four and five-bedroom units," he told the Post at the time. "We all know that the student population maintains a schedule and extra-curricular lifestyle that is not conducive to the working population."

He said Tuesday that the company's decision to now target undergraduates is a missed opportunity to provide housing for the workers coming into town for the new technology, medical and research jobs slated for the STAR Campus.

"It sounds unfortunate but is no surprise to me," Chapman said. "I expected it with this type of project."

Feeney Roser said although she is disappointed, she remains hopeful the project will eventually revert back to its original intent.

"They will find after they do their marketing that they need to reach out to professionals," she said.

Deputy Mayor Jerry Clifton, who voted in favor of the plan in April, agreed.

"It's too convenient to the STAR Campus and it's too convenient to Maryland," he said. "I'm quite convinced there's another market down there."

Out of the Past

Editor's note: Volunteers at the Pencader Heritage Museum have been digitizing old Newark City Council meeting minutes. They share excerpts with Newark Post readers in a weekly column.

First reading of new ordinances in June 1867 included: remove snow from sidewalks within 10 hours after storm or be fined $1; no horses, cattle or swine to roam free, owners fined one dollar for each offense; speed limit 6 mph, subject to fine of $1 to $5; no one to impede progress on sidewalks or streets; no boisterous singing or undue noise or behavior within town limits, fine two dollars first offence.

Jesse Russell, Town Bailiff, was empowered to arrest for all violations his compensation half of all fines collected.

Some cows were impounded, and owners had to pay fines. A suit filed by Commissioners against George P. Miller, Esq., for speeding was dropped on a technicality through the "matchless eloquence of G. M. Murphy, Esq.," on Mr. Miller's behalf. The tax levy for 1868 was $0.10 per hundred dollars' valuation. At the end of 1868 the town treasury held $249.

The 1869 Board of Commissioners included John Pilling, Saul Darlington, S. B. Wright, E. Butterworth and George W. Williams. The tax rate for 1869 was $0.25 per hundred dollars' evaluation. A committee was charged with finding a room suitable for a Station House and "lockup."

After assessment of town property each year, the assessment was displayed in two prominent places in town and a date set for citizens to appeal. Sometimes the assessment was reduced, but not always.

In August 1870, pavement and gutter bridge repairs on Chapel Street, Main Street and Depot Rd. were completed

An Open Letter from Gene Kern, CEO of The Data Centers, LLC

For weeks now, there has been a widening gap between the truth about the data center project at the University of Delaware's STAR campus and the misinformation generated by opponents. I'm writing to you to set the record straight.

The project, known as Wolf Technology Center 1, will be a large-scale data management and storage facility offering its customers 100% reliability due to a self-contained "energy hub" employing a Combined Heat and Power (CHP) design. Reliability is essential because when power to a data center fails, everything shuts down. That means we are no longer able to service the needs of our customers and irreplaceable data is lost.

The CHP concept simultaneously produces heat and electricity from a single fuel source, in this case, clean-burning and abundant natural gas. CHP is endorsed by The US Environmental Protection Agency, the federal Department of Energy, the national Sierra Club, Greenpeace and many other environmental groups. It was the subject of a 2012 Executive Order in which the President ordered various government agencies to promote CHP to boost industrial efficiency and growth.

Because of its 100% reliability, Wolf 1 will be unique -- the only data center of its kind in the world. For that reason, it will attract businesses that must safeguard vast amount of data such as banks, public and private sector researchers, insurers, telecommunications companies, major retailers, government agencies and others. We are confident they will bring their data -- and jobs -- to Delaware.

Some opponents charge that the energy hub will pollute the air. Wolf 1 will operate under the strict supervision of the USEPA and the Delaware Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Control (DNREC). Recently, we submitted our air permit application to DNREC. Data supporting the application show that emissions from Wolf 1 will be well within government standards that protect human health and the environment and much, much lower than the site's previous occupant.

Opponents of Wolf Technology Center 1 refer to it as "a power plant." Their goal is to frighten people by purposely evoking images of contaminant-belching smokestacks. Nothing could be farther from the truth. On their own web site they admitted they could not find the "power plant" on our drawings of the site. This will not be a public utility. The energy hub will exist primarily to serve Wolf 1's operations. The architectural and engineering designs of the energy hub will bear no resemblance to a conventional "power plant."

Wolf 1 will be quiet and we are working on models to prove just that. All of its turbines will be enclosed in acoustically shielded buildings to mitigate noise and comply with the City of Newark's strict noise ordinance. Most of the steam it produces will be reused to create cooling and electricity for the data center and much of the CO2 generated will be captured and sold to industry.

Wolf 1 will help to jumpstart the area's economic engine. Construction will take about 2.5 years and employ about 5,000 union workers during its course. Purchasing materials and supplies locally will be a priority and local retailers and service providers will benefit.

Once Wolf 1 is completed, some 290 good-paying fulltime and 50 part time jobs will be created. And that doesn't include the 300-350 employees of customers who will manage the data and equipment stored with us. The availability of a skilled and well-educated workforce is one of the factors that attracted us to Delaware in the first place! Groundbreaking is still months away, but we have already received hundreds of resumes from local residents seeking those jobs!

Finally, we have repeatedly heard that this project was developed in secret through some sort of conspiracy. Not true in any sense. People with business experience know that companies routinely ask third parties, including government agencies, to agree to protect proprietary information shared in the course of doing business. These "secrecy agreements," also known as "non-disclosure agreements" are absolutely necessary to protect intellectual property, the lifeblood of high-tech businesses like ours. There's no conspiracy here -- just prudent, common business practices.

The decision to build a $1.1 billion facility is not one that is taken lightly. Business leaders and investors considering an undertaking of this scale know that it will be a significant presence in the community. They fully realize that they will be expected to meet or exceed demanding social, environmental and economic standards.

As Chief Executive Officer of The Data Centers LLC, I take this responsibility very seriously. We are a new company with a lot to prove. Wolf 1 will be our showpiece, the first of dozens of data centers we will build in the future. It is imperative that we get it right the first time -- and we pledge to do just that, as a business and as a neighbor.

Gene Kern, CEO
The Data Centers LLC
