college of AGRICULTURE

The College of Agriculture continues to have a strong program here at the university. The college offers several opportunities for its undergraduate students, including agricultural education, agricultural engineering technology, animal and poultry science, entomology and applied ecology, food and resource economics, plant science, and general agriculture. Concentrations may also be arranged in wildlife conservation, landscape horticulture, or preveterinary instruction.

By providing a flexible program of study, the curricula is designed to keep the student up to date on the changes and improvements taking place in the agricultural industry.

The Agricultural Science program stresses the importance of social activities among its members along with the academics. This is done through many clubs and organizations as well as the farmhouse and Alpha Zeta, a co-ed honors fraternity. The college's most prominent event is 'Ag Day' which is sponsored by the university each spring.

The occupational outlook for most agricultural jobs will continue to improve as technological advances increase the need for college-trained personnel.

Townsend Hall houses the College of Agriculture.

Two students quietly enjoy an afternoon near Townsend Hall.

college of ARTS AND SCIENCE

Kevin Montgomery takes a lunch break between classes.

The College of Arts and Science contains the largest number of programs of study at the university. It offers over 60 majors ranging from biology and computer science to psychology and theatre.

Students are able to concentrate on one area of interest while taking general courses in several others, resulting in a well-rounded education. Therefore, in addition to the skill and the major requirements, four groups of breadth requirements must be satisfied. These courses are necessary for the understanding and appreciation of the creative arts and humanities, the study of culture and institutions over time, the empirically based study of human beings and their environment, and the study of natural phenomena through experiment and analysis.

Preprofessional committees with expertise are available to advise students who plan to study dentistry, law, librarianship, medicine, social work, or veterinary medicine.

The College of Arts and Science offers baccalaureate degrees in arts, science, music, and fine arts. Through these programs, students should develop an increased awareness of all aspects of human environment, intellectual curiosity, respect for fact, and skill in reasoning.

While waiting for their next class, Bill Etienne and Judy McCullough sit on a bench outside of Amy DuPont.

college of BUSINESS AND ECONOMICS

Nervously waiting for an interview, Alex Pondok sits in the CP & P office.

The College of Business and Economics is the second largest at Delaware. Baccalaureate degrees are offered in accounting, business administration, and economics. Within the business administration program, students may choose to concentrate in administrative management, financial management, marketing management, or operations management. The college also offers minors in business administration, economics, international business, and management information/decision support systems. Both the accounting and business administration programs are accredited by the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business.

Through a wide variety of courses, students investigate and discover the ways in which business people, economists, government people, accountants, and others work together to achieve a common purpose.

Group projects, papers, and case studies are key tools in the learning process. The college is constantly updating itself to fit the needs of private industry, government, and nonprofit institutions. All of this leads to a solid education at the university however the level of competition for jobs after graduation is still high and very competitive.

While listening to another lecture, Vivian Medinilla daydreams about the weekend to come.

Social hour on the steps of Purnell.

Kristan Speice desperately flips through the Drop/Add booklet for another business course.

Beth Flateman and her group organize a presentation for class.
